

Report on 2021-22 Approved State Budget: $212 Billion, Onerous Proposals Defeated, Advocacy To Continue On Key Issues Including Telehealth

After months of negotiations and arduous battles throughout the Easter Holiday weekend, the final 2021-22 Fiscal Year Budget finally passed this week with messages of necessity (to avoid a state shutdown), which Governor Cuomo characterizes as “the most important budget in modern history.” In the end, given the complexity of some of the issues at hand related to raising revenue, the excluded workers fund and mobile sports betting the budget was enacted seven days into the new fiscal year with a temporary stop gap measure passed to assure state employees would receive their paychecks on time.

The behemoth budget of $212 billion (an increase of $18.7 billion or 9.7% over last fiscal year) includes nearly $5 billion in new revenue through a large tax increase on wealthy New Yorkers and some corporations (see additional details below). It also includes restoration of a planned annual phase-in of a middle-class tax cut program, relief for homeowners and tenants affected by the economic downturn associated with the Covid-19 pandemic and the legalization of mobile sports betting.
